Examining Frailty in the Pediatric & Elderly Populations

Candidates for kidney transplantation are increasingly older and medically frail, with frailty associated with higher waitlist mortality, perioperative complications, and poorer post-transplant outcomes. The use of medical frailty screening tools in the pre-transplant evaluation setting will be highlighted, with a focus on elderly patients. Since 2022, the pediatric heart transplant program at St. Louis Children's Hospital has experienced a 23% increase in median time from listing to transplant, elevating risk during prolonged inpatient waits. A standardized inpatient prehabilitation approach will be examined, including implementation of a frailty score and a daily prehabilitation checklist to support patient conditioning prior to transplant.

At the end of the webinar, participants should be able to:

- Explain the Fried Frailty index and other common frailty assessment tools.
- Apply frailty tools in risk stratifying kidney transplant candidates.
- Describe the components of a modified frailty score for pediatric patients.
- Develop action items that can be established to increase multidisciplinary team's awareness of prehabilitation.
